

What is the role of YMAC Project Officers?

YMAC Project Officers are vital to our organisation and they have many responsibilities. They help to make sure that community understands how native title works and how they can participate in their group’s decision-making.

Our Project Officers also make sure that other YMAC staff and consultants we engage understand about community.

If community members have any cultural concerns, they can talk to a Project Officer, who will explain the issues to the relevant YMAC team to make sure culture is respected.

YMAC Project Officers also play a very important role when it comes to fieldwork, making sure everything runs smoothly and giving support to lawyers and anthropologists at meetings and on-Country.

To speak to a YMAC Project Officer, please call your nearest YMAC regional office.
